IV. Special Presentations

Academic Empowerment Week
-Kozak said that they had held the Academic Empowerment Week. She said that their goal was to educate the campus about pressing issues such as the Diversity Requirement and Minimum Progress. She said that they encouraged the students to take what they learned and put it to use at the Regents meeting tomorrow.

-Lam said that there were three events. She said that the first, which was co-sponsored by the Academic Advancement Program (AAP), focused on going over the different resources on campus. She said that on Wednesday they had an exam jam, in which the students who brought an exam to contribute to the exam bank were given food in exchange. She said that they had two games on the diversity requirement and two on minimum progress which was a fun way to educate people.

-Kozak said that they planned the event in conjunction with the upcoming Regents meeting.

Soze Project
-Gabriela Garcia, a student leader who works with the Soze Project, said that they had come to the meeting to ask for USAC’s support of their program. She said that, two years ago, their project brought several students from South Africa to the United States to put on a play together. She said that the students ranged in age from 10 to 15 years old. She said she felt that the project really helped all the students who were involved in it. She explained how the project works by saying that the first step is for the group of students from South Africa and the group of students from the United States to each write a play. Then, after each group has finished its play, the two groups spend two weeks working together to develop one play based on the outlines of the original two plays. She said they did this through writing assignments, improvisations and other developmental techniques. She said that the joint effort created an environment in which students from each group could discover what they had in common. She said that the play they created was about kids from different backgrounds who had to work together to achieve a common goal. She said that the students wrote the play on their own, and that the University students helped primarily by raising questions rather than telling the younger students what to do.

-Schreiber asked if they were considering expanding the program to kids in the local community.

-Garcia said that they have a program that goes out to 5th grade classes and works with students to create short plays. She said that the project she had been speaking about is an All-Stars Project that is held on weekends.

-Wynn said that she wanted to bring this project before Council so that they could all help support it.

-McKesey said that Eastman and the ASUCLA Board of Directors had donated T-shirts, shorts and slippers to the project participants.

Student Empowerment Internship

-Tajsar said that he was one of five people in charge of the Student Empowerment Internship. He said that this isn’t the first time that this internship has been offered. He cited three major ideas behind the internship: (1) to talk about general issues that affect society and discuss how they affect UCLA in particular; (2) to give the students participating in the internship the tools needed to address these issues; and (3) to place the interns in the offices of USAC Members where they could work on effecting change in a practical way. He said that they have split the interns up based on their interest and experience, and that they tried to get a variety of different experiences into each office.

-Chiang asked what the Council member’s responsibility is to the intern that is assigned to them, and what the intern’s responsibility is to the USAC office.

-McKesey said that that is up to each individual Council member. Chiang asked if it would be fair to ask them to come to certain meetings.

-Tajsar said that whatever could be worked out with the intern would be fine.

-Chiang asked if the interns would be here for the rest of the year.

-McKesey said that they would.

-Schreiber asked who he should contact if the interns fail to meet the requirements he might set.

-Tajsar said that he could contact any of the people in charge of the internship.

-Husse asked if Council members could come to the workshops.

-Tajsar said that they could. He said that they are on Thursdays from 6 to 8pm.

UC Regents Meeting

-Salazar said that she was a representative from the Affirmative Action Coalition. She said that the Regents would be discussing four issues at their upcoming meeting, including: enrollment restrictions, increases in student fees, outreach funding and Comprehensive Review.

-Samaan said that the Affirmative Action Coalition is demanding a freeze on student fee increases; that the Regents make outreach a priority; that Comprehensive Review be continued, and; that the admissions guidelines be retained.

-Salazar said that their theme is education not incarceration. She said that fewer and fewer students are able to attend the schools of their choice despite the fact that more and more are becoming eligible.

-Cajayon said that they want to protect student needs, and that one of their top priorities is outreach. She said that they also want the Regents to hold their next meeting at UCLA or at some other site in Southern California.
-Salazar said that more student input needs to be considered in making these decisions. She said that this is first and foremost a place of education.
-Samaan said that they want to see the UC System stick to its priorities of affordability, accessibility and quality.
-Cajayon said that there would be a period for public commentary at 8:00am and that they would be meeting to march to Covel Commons at 9:30am.
